135,293 Dental Hygienists

These are the individuals that teach patients how to practice good oral hygiene. They examine teeth and gums, remove calculus, stains and plaque, take & develop dental x-rays, and apply cavity-preventive agents such as fluorides and sealants among a myriad of other procedures.

Next to dentists, Dental Hygienists are the highest paid individuals in the dental office. Many dental hygiene professionals are able to choose their own working hours. This combination gives them the spare time, and the means, to maintain a broad range of recreational interests.

They are excellent prospects for continuing education, recruitment, health & medical publications, insurance, gifts & other high-end offers.
