39,541 Dieticians and Nutritionists

Dieticians and Nutritionists specialize in planning food and nutrition programs and supervise the preparation and serving of meals. They help to prevent and treat illnesses by promoting healthy eating habits and recommending dietary modifications, such as the use of less salt for those with high blood pressure or the reduction of fat and sugar intake for those who are overweight.

Dieticians manage food service systems for institutions such as hospitals and schools, promote sound eating habits through education, and conduct research. 46 states require some type of licensing and/or certification.

They are excellent prospects for continuing education, nutrition and food related publications, insurance, fund raisers and more.
