69,291 Chemical Engineers

A brand new list!

These professionals work in manufacturing, pharmaceuticals, healthcare, design and construction, pulp and paper, petrochemicals, food processing, specialty chemicals, microelectronics, electronic and advanced materials, polymers, business services, biotechnology, and environmental health and safety industries, among others.

Within these industries, chemical engineers rely on their knowledge of mathematics and science—particularly chemistry—to overcome technical problems safely and economically. And, of course, they draw upon and apply their engineering knowledge to solve any technical challenges they encounter. Their expertise can also be applied in the areas of law, education, publishing, finance, and medicine, as well as in many other fields that require technical training.

Chemical engineers also develop solutions to environmental problems, such as pollution control and remediation. And, they process chemicals, which are used to make or improve just about everything we see around us.

These individuals are each listed at their business address. Phone numbers are available for virtually all and fax phones are available for more than 42,000.
