36,559 Environmental Scientists & Engineers

The latest compilation of specialists in this growing, important field. They are highly trained and very involved in problems and issues facing the "Biosphere" - Earth. Those employed in business are often responsible for insuring that their companies operate within EPA guidelines and the law. Pollution control, energy research and the identification of environmental hazards are a few of the specialties included in these disciplines.

These Environmental Engineers and Scientists are very good prospects for scholarly and consumer publications related to the environment. They also attend seminars and workshops and purchase equipment.
